Summary

The clause does not directly relate to any statutory provision and is more of a general contractual risk.

Risk Reasoning

The clause pertains to breach of contract, which is generally governed by common law principles rather than specific statutory provisions. The language focuses on the non-defaulting party's right to recover losses due to breach, which aligns with standard contractual remedies but does not address any particular legal relationship or risk.

Contractual Concern

Potential for breach of contract claims by non-defaulting party.

Suggested Mitigation

Ensure clear communication regarding default expectations and consequences to prevent future breaches.
